Research has significant implications for the community, particularly in health. A successfully completed health research study, especially with substantial results, must be communicated to key stakeholders to empower decision making. In this light, it is important for researchers to know how to communicate research findings to inform and share evidence to the general public. This activity aims to exercise and cultivate researchers' academic, presentation, and research communication skills. Objectives At the end of the activity, the student and professional participants from the regional consortia should be able to present the results of their research study in a visual abstract poster. Expected Deliverables Visual research abstract posters presenting the results of the research from student and professional participants of the regional consortia.
